Woman's death investigated

by Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

PAINTSVILLE — It may be weeks or months before the cause of death is determined for a Johnson County woman whose body was found along Rt. 80 in Knott County last week.
Christina Barnett, 34, of Flat Gap, went missing Sept. 18, and family members found her body eight days later.
Knott County Coroner William Blair confirmed Monday that an autopsy showed Barnett's body had not been burned as previously reported by other media outlets.
"She was found in an advanced stage of decomposition," Blair said. "Since she had been missing for eight days, we are presuming she was there eight days. It may be weeks or months before we actually know the cause of death."
Barnett's mother, Donna Hale, said that she immediately became concerned for her daughter when her cell phone and Facebook account went silent.
"We are a close family, and she doesn't go without calling or getting on Facebook, so when everything went silent and she didn't show up the next day, we called the Kentucky State Police," Hale said. "She was with her boyfriend when she left, and yes, she did meet him on the Internet, but they had been seeing each other for months. It wasn't like she just met him and took

by Tony Fyffe

FRANKFORT — The Big Sandy region is home to one school district and six schools classified as "distinguished" under Kentucky's student assessment and accountability system, with one ranked the No. 2 elementary school in the state.
Data released Friday by the Kentucky Department of Education showed that most schools in Lawrence, Johnson, Floyd and Martin counties improved their scores during the 2012-2013 school year.
Based on their high test results, the Johnson County School District is listed as distinguished and six schools — Porter and W.R. Castle Elementary in Johnson County, Paintsville High, and May Valley, Stumbo Elementary, Osborne Elementary in Floyd County — are classified as distinguished/progressing. The designation means they performed at or above the 90th percentile.
May Valley's score of 82.3, up from its previous 77.1, puts it as the No. 2 elementary in the state.

Lawrence County
The Lawrence County School District, with an overall score 53.0, is classified as needs improvement/progressing. The previous year, the district was listed as needs improvement with a score of 48.3.

THE INEZ TRANSFER Station closed early Sunday and was still closed Monday morning, but people continued to dump their trash in front of the facility rather than take it back home and wait for it to open or to take it as advised by personnel on duty to the Warfield Transfer Station. An employee said the facility was full on Sunday and shut down around 3 p.m. Due to a cut in overtime for the drivers who replace the bins with empty containers, the bins weren't emptied at 4 a.m. as they would have been previously. The employee also said he anticipated the empty bins to arrive around 11 a.m. BSN photo/Lilly Adkins off with him. She was last seen in Hazard, and we started to search for her there, but focused mainly from London to here."

Hale said that she recently underwent a hip replacement and that she was physically unable to get out and look for her daughter, so she stayed and monitored the phone and Facebook, while other family members continued to search.

"We did everything we could to find her," she said. "I knew something was wrong, but I never dreamed we would find her like that. For the first couple of days, we had about 10 family members searching for her, and it dwindled down to three by the time we actually did find her. I kept monitoring the phones and posting things on Facebook, getting people to share and asking them to contact me with any information they had. It's horrific how she was found with trash all over her. I'm thankful that she wasn't burned like they said, but it is still horrible how she was found."

Hale said Barnett was a former waitress who had to quit after breaking a leg and having to have rods and screws put in.

"She didn't have any children and had been staying with me and taking care of me and two grandchildren that I am raising," Hale said. "She was my eldest child and any time you needed her, she would be right there. I don't know what I am going to do now."

Hale set up an estate account through BB&T to help pay for her daughter's funeral and burial expense.

Hale said the fund is set up for the estate of Christina Barnett and that any contributions can also be mailed to Estate of Christina Barnett, 4985 KY Rt. 201, Sitka, Ky. 41255.

"The funeral home said we had to pay so much and I couldn't pay it so I had to get a loan and that money can only be used for the purpose of paying for the funeral and burial," Hale explained. "I don't want people to think we are just begging for money, it can only be used for that purpose and I know there has been one person who called the funeral home, found out it was paid to them and then saw dramatic improvement during the last testing cycle and is classified as proficient/progressing. The school's 2012-2013 score was 60.6, up from 46.4 the previous year.

TESTS: One district, six schools are distinguished

Lawrence County school superintendent Mike Armstrong was pleased with the high school's upward spiral.

"This new ranking is a real reason to celebrate at Lawrence County High School," Armstrong said in an e-mail. "Moving from a 14 percentile rank in the 2011-2012 school year to a 78 percentile ranking for the 2012-2013 school year is a well earned gain. And earning a classification of 'Proficient/Progressing' is a really wonderful acknowledgment! All of the staff and students at LCHS should be especially proud of the improvement signified by this high score. This score places Lawrence County High School near the top of all of the high schools up and down the Big Sandy River. Likewise, the citizens of Lawrence County should feel quite proud of the gains exemplified by this score. The high school staff, students and the community has a real reason to be encouraged by this improvement!"

Armstrong also noted that the school district's middle grades — Blaine, Fallsburg and Louisa Middle School — earned a needs improvement/progressing classification, with Fallsburg also in the "high progress school" category.

Blaine's elementary grades were also listed as needs improvement/progressing, while Fallsburg's elementary students were classified as needs improvement, as was Louisa East Elementary.

"The elementary grades at Louisa East and Fallsburg are already working to identify their areas of concern in order to improve their accountability performance," Armstrong said. From a district perspective, our 'Needs Improvement Progressing' classification is a step-up. Among other accountability measures, we did improve our Annual Measurable Objective (AMO). In fact, the district exceeded our AMO by 3.7. We also met our district 'Participation Rate' and actually exceeded our 'Graduation Rate Goal.'"

Johnson County

Superintendent Steve Trimble noted in a press release that the Johnson County School District is ranked as one of the highest performing in the state, earning a distinguished classification.

"Our students have made us so proud!" Trimble said in the release. "As a district, we have scored in the top 92 percent of all Kentucky school systems. The system has earned a classification of 'Distinguished' which is awarded to only districts scoring at 90th percentile and above. Only twenty-five districts earned the 'distinguished' classification. Of the 25 districts scoring in the 90th percentile and above, twelve of them are independent districts. Johnson County is the twelfth highest scoring county school system in Kentucky. The system is the highest scoring district in the surrounding area, only to be surpassed by Pikeville Independent."

In addition, two Johnson County elementary schools, W.R. Castle and Porter, are classified as distinguished/progressing, with scores of 74.9 and 73.1, respectively.

Central and Highland elementary schools, and Johnson County Middle School are classified as proficient/progressing, Johnson Central High School is proficient, and Flat Gap Elementary is classified as needs improvement/progressing and Meade Memorial Elementary is listed as needs improvement.

Paintsville Independent

Classified as a proficient school district the previous year, Paintsville Independent's test scores dropped in 2012-2013, going from 61.3 to 57.2 and being classified as needs improvement.

Paintsville's elementary and middle grades are also classified as needs improvement after having a proficient classification the previous year.

The district's good news is that Paintsville High School is classified as distinguished/progressing with a score of 69.1 and a state ranking of 22. The school's results rose from 65.5 to 69.1.

Paintsville superintendent Coy Samons said he was "pleased with the improvement of almost 4 points and a 'Distinguished' rating of 96% for Paintsville High School (09-12)."

"When our 'finished product' is ranked in the top 4% of all high schools, it is evident that Paintsville Independent students are acquiring the necessary skills to be successful in the next phase of life," Samons said. "As for the disconnect in achievement at the middle school level (06-08) with a score drop of 3 points and elementary (03-05) downward movement of almost 12 points, school district personnel and staff at our respective schools are employing the necessary measures to meet improvement goals for this school year.

"I am confident the 'Needs Improvement' label for Paintsville Independent Schools will be short lived."

Floyd County

The Floyd County School District earned a proficient classification after having had a needs improvement rating the previous. The district's overall score increased from 55.1 to 61.5.

Leading the way in Floyd County was May Valley Elementary with an 82.3 score and a distinguished/progressing classification. The school's 2011-2012 score was 77.1. Its score this year put the school as the No. 2 elementary in the state.

Also listed as distinguished/progressing were Stumbo Elementary, with a score of 76.1 in the elementary grades and 65.7 in the middle grades; and Osborne Elementary, with a score of 73.2.

Allen Central Middle and Betsy Layne Elementary's middle grades are classified as proficient/progressing, while Allen Central, Betsy Layne and Prestonsburg high schools are proficient.

Rated as needs improvement/progressing are Duff, Betsy Layne and Prestonsburg elementary schools, and Adams and South Floyd middle schools. South Floyd High School is classified as needs improvement.

Floyd County superintendent Henry Webb said officials are "thrilled" that the district is listed as a proficient district, which he said is "so close to achieving our goal of being a top 50 school district."

"This year we ranked 52nd among Kentucky's 174 school districts," Webb said.

He also praised May Valley, Stumbo and Osborne elementary schools.

"Once again, May Valley is one of the state's top performing elementary schools," Webb said. "Ranking second among 730 elementary schools this year and with nine consecutive years of top ten rankings, May Valley continues to demonstrate a remarkable commitment to student learning and achievement."

He also said Stumbo Elementary had the most dramatic improvement in the district.

Martin County

The Martin County School District and four schools — Eden, Inez and Warfield elementary schools, and Inez Middle — are classified as a needs improvement/progressing, while Warfield Middle is listed as needs improvement.

The exception is Sheldon Clark High School, which is rated proficient/progressing with a score of 58.4. The school's previous score was 50.6, which put it in the needs improvement category.

Martin County superintendent Steve Meadows said "it's a good time to buy stock in Martin County Schools."

"Because of the significant and dramatic improvements made from school year 2011-12 to 2012-13, the educational growth in Martin County is now recognized as being in the top 10% of all school districts in the state of Kentucky," Meadows said in an e-mail. "In school year 2011-12, our district was found in the state's lowest performing 17th percentile of all school districts. The 2012-13 school year tells a very different story—we are now in the 52nd percentile— a High Progress District! Although the school report card we receive each year is incredibly complex and involves multiple factors of measurement, this distinction is really the result of the commitment and dedication of a school community that refuses to accept anything less than a quality education for their kids. When a community begins to place a high value on education, that community will reap the rewards of that investment."

Individual results can be found on the Kentucky Department of Education's Web site.

PONTIKI: Production to cease in December

Craft said in the release. “When Pontiki resumed production last year, we knew the market outlook was uncertain but were hopeful that conditions would improve. Unfortunately, market conditions remain weak, and we have been unable to secure new coal sales commitments for Pontiki coal beyond the existing 2013 contracts. While we are deeply saddened by the impact of this decision on our employees, their families and their communities, we have no choice but to take this unfortunate but necessary step to begin the process of winding down production operations at Pontiki.”

Alliance Resource Partners, L.P. also said in the release that they it will continue operations at the Pontiki complex until early December to fulfill commitments under existing sales contracts, at which time the mine is expected to cease production.

One coal company employee said the company’s current contract with Georgia Power will cease at the end of the year.

Alliance Resource Partners, L.P. also said in the release that it will continue to grow in the Illinois Basin and Northern Appalachia and that management is currently evaluating options to provide employment opportunities to Pontiki personnel at operations in those regions.

“Information sessions will be scheduled in the near future to allow Pontiki employees to learn more about these opportunities,” the release said.

The release said the temporary closure of Pontiki from Aug. 29, 2012, through Nov. 25, 2012, by the Mine Safety and Health Administration cost the company $26.6 million of related losses and charges, including a $19 million non-cash asset impairment charge at the Pontiki Mine Complex and that ARLP does not currently expect the closure of the Pontiki mine to have a material impact on its 2013 financial results.

The release also says, “Statements and projections used throughout this release are based on current expectations. These statements and projections are forward-looking, and actual results may differ materially. These projections do not include the potential impact of any mergers, acquisitions or other business combinations that may occur after the date of this release.”

STORES: Police probe series of armed robberies

The man was identified as being approximately 6 feet tall, wearing a mask, gloves and blue jeans.

Troopers conducted a search of the area but were unable to locate the subject, the release said.

The incident remains under investigation by Kentucky State Police Det. Kevin Newsome.

Unless you've been living under a rock, you know Apple has released two new iPhones. With much less fanfare, new Android and Windows Phone smartphones enter the market regularly.

So you decide it's time to put down your hard-earned money on one of these latest and greatest gadgets. But what do you do with your old smartphone? Well, you can always sell it and make some of your money back.

There are other options. A smartphone is basically a portable computer, and you can program it to do plenty of other things.

First, however, you need to turn off cellular data. Otherwise, your phone will drain your battery trying to find a signal. On an iPhone, go to Settings>>Cellular. For an iPad, it's Settings>>Cellular Data. Turn Cellular Data off.

In Android, swipe down from the top of the screen and look for the Mobile Data icon. You also might have a widget on your home screen.

Otherwise, go to Settings and under Wireless and Network, tap More Settings>>Mobile networks and uncheck Mobile data. The steps could vary by manufacturer, so check your manual if this doesn't work for you.

On a Windows Phone, go to the App list and go to Settings>>Cellular. Turn Data connection to Off. Make sure "For limited Wi-Fi connectivity" is set to "Don't use cellular data."

Now it's time to turn it into something else. The easiest option is a portable media player.

1. A media streaming gadget and player

Load it up with your favorite songs, shows or movies and pair it with a good set of earbuds. If you need a media manager, DoubleTwist is a popular option that works for any gadget.

Your gadget can also use your home Wi-Fi to stream videos or music. Fire up Netflix or Amazon's Music service app and go to town.

If your phone has an HDMI port, it can connect to your HDTV. You can use it as a media-streaming gadget in place of a Roku box or Apple TV.

If your smartphone doesn't have HDMI, it can still be a part of your home theater. There are infrared attachments that turn a smartphone into a powerful universal remote. If you have a newer TV, check to see if the TV manufacturer has a remote control app.

2. A portable gaming unit

If you have a child or grandchild begging for a Nintendo DS or Sony Vita, your old smartphone can be better. There are hundreds of game apps to entertain them, and many of them are free! Candy Crush Saga is the current must-play game that has everyone addicted. It would be a good distraction on a long car ride.

3. A fine GPS

Your smartphone makes a fine GPS with an app like NavFree USA. It downloads maps to use offline and offers free turn-by-turn navigation. Google Maps can also download maps offline.

4. Kitchen recipe holder

In addition to a co-pilot, your smartphone can be your assistant chef! Load it up with some cooking apps and your favorite recipes. Fire up a recipe site and get

CHURCH OF JESUS Christ of Latter-day Saints youth "put on the armor of God" every morning by attending seminary before going to school at Johnson Central High School and Paintsville High School.

Seminary class available to anyone interested

by Bonnie Howell

It's that time of year again. Local high school attendance is in full force but while most teens are still snoozing, Mormon high school aged youth (members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints), arise before dawn and drive to their daily early morning seminary class to complete an hour of scripture study before attending high school.

The objective of seminary is to help youth understand and rely on the teachings and Atonement of Jesus Christ, qualify for the blessings of the temple, and prepare themselves, their families, and others for eternal life with their Father in Heaven. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints encourages all teens, regardless of their religious affiliation, to complete this four-year seminary program. We believe that attending seminary helps youth "put on the armor of God" every morning before facing the challenges of the day, some of which include dating, dress and appearance, entertainment and media, friends, honesty and integrity, language, music and dancing, sexual purity, work and self-reliance.

Seminary is a worldwide program, available in over 134 countries and territories worldwide, with 391,680 students currently enrolled. A Latter-day Saint teen enters the seminary program when he/she begins high school as a freshman. Classes are held either in meetinghouses or member homes and are taught by trained volunteers. During the next four years, students study the Old Testament, New Testament, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. This year's course of study is The Book of Mormon. For those who cannot attend seminary daily, a home study and online course is also available. By the time an LDS teen graduates from high school, he/she will also graduate and receive a diploma from seminary. As a result of the seminary program and the resultant extensive study of theology, most LDS youth are more knowledgeable of the Bible than their non-member friends. The Paintsville Branch Seminary has a current enrollment of eight students, which include six early morning students, one home study student and one on-line student.

Seminary is an everyday reminder "to live like the Savior so we can live with him again." Young people who are not members of the Church are also welcome to participate. There is no fee to enroll in seminary. If you would like more information about the seminary program, visit www.lds.org, call 606-253-9393 or ask your Mormon neighbor.

sville Branch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Book signing this weekend

PAINTSVILLE — Johnson County native Todd Pack will sign his new book, "The Stories of Jenny Wiley," in the arts and crafts area at the Kentucky Apple Festival in Paintsville Oct. 4-5.

"The Stories of Jenny Wiley" (152 pp., Storyatom, $15) is the first book to not only explore the history and legends of the heroic Kentucky pioneer woman but also to look at the lives of some of the historians and storytellers who preserved her story and carried it into the 21st century.

Jenny Wiley was a young wife and mother in 1780s Virginia when a band of Native Americans attacked her farm, killed her children and dragged her hundreds of miles, across rugged hills and swollen rivers, to the wilderness of present-day Johnson County, Ky.

Her story of sorrow and survival became the stuff of legend, a tale passed from one settler to another as a warning and from one generation to the next as a testament to the hardships and bravery of the Big Sandy Valley's first settlers.

"What's interesting, though, is that Jenny Wiley's story—exactly what happened to her family, where her captors took her and what led to her escape—was never really written down in her lifetime," Pack said.

"There are a few historical records that confirm the basic outline of what happened, but most of what we 'know' about her life is really just legend, and there are quite a few legends," he said. "Some of the stories are probably true, but some of them couldn't be true.

CARD OF THANKS

Perhaps you sent a lovely card,
Or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray,
If so we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
That anyone could say.
Perhaps you were not there at all,
Just thought of us that day.
Whatever your did to console our hearts,
We thank you so much whatever the part.

The family of Louise Bradley especially appreciates Shawn Spears and Young Funeral Home staff, Bradley Gap Church, Morgans Creek Church, Myrtle Chapel Church, as well as many relatives and friends for the care and kindness shown during the time of the loss of our loved one.

*Thank you,
Darrell Bradley

Adkins wins fishing tourney on Paintsville Lake

STAFFORDSVILLE — The Tug Valley Bass Anglers held its seventh tournament of the 2013 season on Paintsville Lake Sunday, Sept. 11.

A total of 26 anglers competed in the event, which Gerry Adkins won.

Paintsville Lake was at normal pool with clear water on most of the lake and stained water in the main upper end and a temperature around 74 degrees.

Weather for the tournament was perfect with partly cloudy skies, moderate winds with an air temperature in the low 70s.

September fishing is notoriously tough. This time of year the fish are transitioning to their fall locations and they are hard to locate and pattern. The fish were scattered, but most of them seemed to still be on the main lake and were from 5 to 15 feet deep.

The main pattern for this tournament was to fish top water in the morning then when the sun got bright fish crankbaits, spinnerbaits and soft plastics mainly finesse lures tight to cover.

The top finishers for the tournament were as follows: 1st — Gerry Adkins - (5 fish), 7.22 lbs.; 2nd — Kevin Marcum - (5 fish), 6.08 lbs.; 3rd — MO - (5 fish), 4.14 lbs.; 4th — Chris Taylor - (5 fish), 3.50 lbs.; 5th — Trent Ramey - (5 fish), 3.46 lbs.; 6th — Kevin Runyon - (5 fish), 3.38 lbs.; 7th — Joe Collins - (5 fish), 3.32 lbs.; 8th — Michael Salyer - (5 fish) 3.19 lbs.; 9th — Tommy Hopkins - (5 fish) 3.06 lbs.; 10th — Lacy Edmiston - (5 fish) 3.01 lbs., Keith Pacific.
